

THE NEW LONGEVITY: CHALLENGE AND OPPORTUNITY

October 23 to 25, 2025

Calonge i Sant Antoni (Girona), Spain

Call for Abstracts for Academic Seminar

The Campus of Experience - Universitat Internacional de Catalunya (UIC Barcelona)

The Scientific Seminar, that will be held in Calonge i Sant Antoni (Costa Brava), will analyze the challenges and opportunities of aging in a world with increasing life expectancy.

The concept of "New Longevity" redefines old age into three stages: older but not elderly, onset of frailty, and loss of autonomy. The seminar will focus particularly on the pre-dependence phases and the contribution of older adults to society.

This seminar will bring together academics, educators, professionals, policymakers, entrepreneurs, and senior students, fostering the exchange of research and the development of initiatives to improve quality of life in old age. Discussions will address training needs and the design of innovative public- private policies.

The program will feature keynote lectures, round tables, scientific presentations, and cultural visits, promoting debate and collaboration.

Call for Abstracts

Submissions of abstracts (150-200 words) are invited in the following thematic areas:

Meaning and quality of life in old age: Well-being and purpose in later life. Interventions to promote a meaningful life for older adults.

Society, relationships, and social prescribing: Strategies to foster meaningful relationships and new experiences in social prescribing.

Transmission of values • and Erasmus+: The role of values in intergenerational education.

University programs for older adults: Educational models and best practices related to the "new longevity."

The accepted papers will be presented at the seminar and published in an indexed academic publisher.
